

BIO

I'm Frankie Boyle, an experiential artist and speaker whose work sits at the intersection of neuroscience, environmental design and human behaviour.

I grew up with Developmental Language Disorder. Before I had words, I had light. I learned to read a room before I could read a written word — and that sensitivity became the foundation of everything I create. Over the past decade, I've designed immersive environments and sculptural installations for Google, Samsung, Tiffany & Co., Burberry, Magnum and MK Illuminations, and spoken at stages across the UK and internationally, from the Royal College of Art to Light + Intelligent Building Middle East in Dubai. I've been a featured author in The Light Within Us and a featured artist in Women Light Artists by Light Collective. I am currently exhibiting at Saatchi Gallery, London.

My talks are visually led and grounded in neuroscience, circadian biology and human behaviour. I translate complex research into clear, embodied insight — leaving audiences with a fundamentally different relationship to the spaces they design, occupy and commission.

My core belief is simple: the spaces we design ultimately design us.

Speaking fees from £1,500. Keynotes, facilitated sessions and panel moderation.

SPEAKER TOPICS

My talks are visually led, research-grounded, and built around a single urgent idea: the spaces we inhabit are quietly shaping who we are. Every session is adapted to the audience and context, and may include interactive moments, guided discussion, and visual presentation.

THE SPACES WE DESIGN, DESIGN US

The signature talk. How our environments are silently shaping our behaviour, focus, emotional state and nervous system, and what we can do about it. A foundation session for any audience encountering these ideas for the first time.

THE HIDDEN COST OF YOUR ENVIRONMENT

Why the sensory conditions of your workspace are directly affecting your team's performance, focus, retention and mental health. A practical, provocative session built for corporate, HR and leadership audiences..

LIGHT AS A BEHAVIOURAL TOOL

How light influences decision-making, mood, productivity and nervous system regulation. From circadian rhythm to emotional response, and why most buildings are getting it completely wrong.

NEURODIVERSITY AS A SENSORY ADVANTAGE

What neurodivergent perception reveals about designing environments that work for every brain. One of Frankie's most requested sessions, consistently resonant with DEI, workplace inclusion and design leadership audiences.

THE NEUROSCIENCE OF BEAUTIFUL SPACES

How aesthetic environments influence the brain, attention and emotional response. Why beauty is not decorative, it is biological. And why this matters for every space you commission, design or occupy.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY

"We were all captivated by her presence and her words. Throughout the event I saw beautiful faces, curious minds, people truly listening and absorbing her work. Frankie Boyle you shone like a diamond."

Jess Gallagher, Lutron Europe

"Engaging, insightful, inspiring — as well as challenging me to think. Frankie reinforced for me that 80% of our decision making happens in our subconscious, and that we have the technology at our fingertips to craft environments that work to the benefit of our bodies and brains."

Nick Clarke, PRG UK / Hear Yourself Think

"It was inspiring to learn more about Frankie's approach to using light creatively — transforming it from mere functionality to a tool for atmosphere, emotion, and storytelling."

Lighting & Design Professional, Lutron Europe Experience Centre
